Affiliation

- Turkish belongs to the Turkic branch of the Altaic language family.
- It is the westernmost of the Turkic languages that are spoken across Central Asia and is generally classified as a member of the South-West group, also known as the Oguz group.
- Other Turkic languages, all of which are closely related:
  - Azerbaijani (Azeri), Kazakh, Kyrgyz, Tatar, Turkmen, Uighur, Uzbek.
Where is Turkish Spoken

- About 56 million people speak Turkish, most live in Turkey where it is the official language.
- In Bulgaria there are about 850,000 speakers.
- About 37,000 Turkish speakers live in Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, and Azerbaijan.
- In Cyprus, Turkish is a co-official language where it is spoken as a first language by 19 percent of the population.
- Over a million speakers are found in Bulgaria, Macedonia, and Greece; over 1.5 million speakers live in Germany.

- There are some other classifications that distinguish the following dialect groups: South-western, Central Anatolia, Eastern, Rumelian, and Kastamonu dialects.
Turkey holds the Turkish Language Olympics

Students who learned Turkish from over a hundred countries compete in different titles such as: grammar, talking skills, writing essays, reciting poems, singing songs, theatre, general culture, etc.
The Turkish alphabet contains 29 letters. There are 8 vowels and 21 consonants. Although the English letters Q, W, X do not appear, there are 6 more letters, namely; Ç, Ğ, Ş, Ö, Ü, İ. The other letters are the same in both English and Turkish alphabets, but they are pronounced differently.

Linguistic Features

- Verbs come at the end of sentences
  - Turkish: Köpek suyu içiyor.
  - English: (The) dog (the) water is drinking.
  - Turkish: Güç bunda kuvvetli.
  - English: (The) Force in this one strong (is).

- Adjectives precede verbs

- Vowel Harmony

- Agglutination: suffixes give number and gender although:

- There is no grammatical gender
  - The word, "o", for example, means "he", "she" and "it".
Communication Style

- Turkish speakers do not require as much personal space as many other cultures and will stand close to you while conversing. Backing away can be construed as unfriendly.
- Maintain eye contact while speaking since Turkish speakers take this as a sign of sincerity.
- When addressing a Turkish speaker the most common method is to call a man by his first name followed by 'bey' (pronounced bay). So, Ertan Gonca, would be Ertan Bey. Similarly a woman's first name would be followed by 'hanim' (pronounced ha-num).
- A common phrase you will hear Turks using is 'efendim' (literally 'my master'). You may hear this from a waiter, a secretary, taxi driver, doorman, shop staff and many others. It is simply a polite way of addressing people you are not familiar with.
